

ABOUT HARWINTON

The Town's first meeting was held in 1737. The 32 square mile area once known as Hartford's town and Windsor's town would become Harwinton. Nowhere else in the world is there another place named Harwinton.

Harwinton is positioned at the border of Connecticut's famed Litchfield Hills and the suburban retail and business hubs of CT's Farmington Valley. It offers quintessential New England charm—bucolic farms, family- friendly events steeped in local traditions, acres of open spaces—with the convenience of easy and efficient access to the trappings of modern living.

Over those years, the landscape has certainly changed but one thing that will never change is the community spirit of a New England small town. Throughout the seasons, there are numerous community functions that keep this spirit alive. It's no wonder why Connecticut Magazine rated Harwinton one of the top small towns in the state!

Connecticut Magazine ranked Harwinton #2 in Quality of Life towns of 3,500-6,500 population in 2012. The town is located in close proximity to the educational, cultural and business opportunities afforded by the cities of Hartford, Waterbury and Torrington.

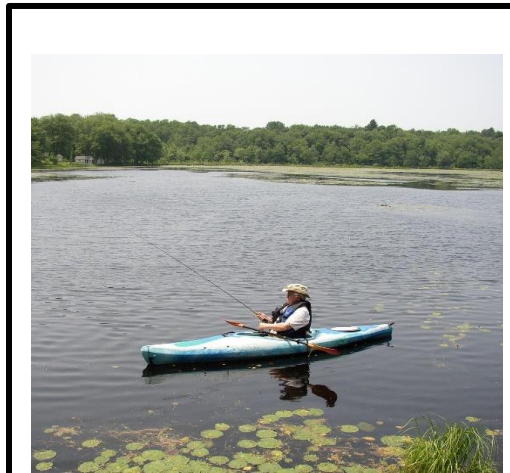

Harwinton and neighboring Burlington comprise Regional School District #10. Connecticut statewide test scores place this district's students in the top tier of the state.

Harwinton has maintained its rural agrarian tradition, with several working farms still in operation today.

There are several horse farms, including those providing stable and riding opportunities.

There are ample fishing and hunting opportunities available, as well as passive recreation and hiking. The Roraback Wildlife Management Area provides nearly 2,000 acres of protected open space, designated hunting areas, as well as numerous hiking trails.

Recreational opportunities include Fairview Farms, an 18 Hole Golf Course. Encompassing 170 acres, it is one of Connecticut's most picturesque and playable public golf courses and also offers a first-class restaurant and banquet facility.
